Chateau Zbraslav

Brief History

Chateau Zbraslav, originally a Cistercian monastery founded at the end of the 13th century, has undergone a rich history. After being destroyed by the Hussites in 1420, it went through periods of reconstruction and rebuilding, particularly during the Renaissance under the leadership of Abbot Antoine II Plamming. Following the Josephine reforms in 1785, which dissolved the monastery, its buildings were adapted for various purposes, including sugar production. In the 20th century, the property was purchased by Knight Bartoň of Dobeníň and transformed into a castle. After 1948, the castle was confiscated by the state. Throughout the 20th century, the property underwent several changes, including its use by the National Gallery and its later restitution to the Bartoň family of Dobeníň. Today, some parts of the former monastery house the Náprstek Museum's spaces.
